Don't Hear Everything.

The art of not hearing should be learned by all. It is fully as important to domestic happiness as a cultivated ear, for so much money and time are expended. There are so many things which it is painful to hear, many which we ought not to hear, very many which, if heard, will disturb the temper, corrupt simplicity and modesty, detract from contentment and happiness, that every one should be educated to take in or shut out sounds according to his pleasure.

If a man falls into a violent passion and calls us all names, at the first word we should shut our ears and hear no more. If, in our quiet voyage of life, we find ourselves caught in one of those domestic whirlwinds of scolding, we should shut our ears as a sailor would furl his sail, and making all tight, send before the gale. If a hot and restless man begins to inflame our feelings, we should consider what mischief these fiery words may do in our magazine below, where our temper is kept, and instantly close the door.

If, as has been remarked, all the petty things said of one by heedless or ill-natured idlers were to be brought home to him, he would become a mere walking pincushion, a stock full of sharp remarks. It would be happy, when among good men, we should open our ears; when among bad men, shut them. It is not worth while to hear what our neighbors say about our children, what our rivals say about our business, our dress or our affairs.

The art of not hearing, though untaught in our schools, is by no means unpractical in society. We have noticed that a well-bred woman never hears a vulgar or impertinent remark. A kind of discreet deafness saves one from many insults, from much blame, from not a little condescension in dishonorable conversation. —Treasure Trove.

Woman's Sense of Generosity.

The greatest need at present is for concerted action among women. Never mingling together as men have done, they are in general as ignorant of life, its temptations and possibilities as of their own capacities. That women are harder upon each other than men are upon them is the wickedest lie ever taught and one that the slightest observation explodes. It has seemed to keep them apart and prevent independent, straight-forward action. When they begin to get acquainted, as in clubs and societies, the mutual surprise and delight at finding so much earnestness and sisterly feeling is something really pathetic. Many a shy, stiff, narrow woman expands under the sense of comradeship and sympathy like a flower brought from the cellar into the sunshine, and blossoms out in a way as surprising to herself as it is delightful to her friends. Like Gloriana in one of Mrs. Whitney's stories, she knew there were "good times in the world, but never expected to be in them," and now she learns how to contribute her own share to them. More than all other means of growth are these associations, and the influence of the many acting as one will be the most powerful factor in that enlightened womanhood which will be the salvation of society. —Henner M. Poole in Good Housekeeping.

The Education of Girls.

The education, the life of today's woman, has unfitted them to be mothers, but the education of today's girls is bringing them to womanhood more perfect specimens of their kind, physically as well as mentally, strong and healthy in mind and body, able to endure the suffering of motherhood; willing to give a few years of life to producing new life, reasoning with well-developed faculties how to make that new life stronger and more fit to take yet another step forward.

Nothing is more marked in our progress than awakening to the need of less confining clothing for the body, less confining life for the physical strength, less confining education for the mind. Little use is there to discuss the relative weight and size of the masculine and feminine brain. No argument pro or con can prove anything; those people of the latter half of the next century will know what we can only speculate on, for the hours are burst. —"S. S. E. M." in Chicago Herald.

How to Take Pills.

A writer gives the following directions for taking pills daily: If the pill is tasteless, let it be taken lightly between the lips, and a drink of water will carry it down with no trouble. If disagreeable to the taste, it is better to place the pill as far back as possible on the tongue, and then take a good draught of water or any light beverage. Let the most inveterate of pill haters give this simplest of methods a fair trial, and he will be quite an exception if he does not own his difficulties gone. Should he, however, remain clamorous, another plan may be tried: envision the pill in a small piece of rice or water paper, place this in a tablespoon, set up with water, put the spoon as far back in the throat as possible, and the whole mass will be swallowed with ease. —Youth's Companion.

To Get Rid of a Sty.

When you are particularly anxious to attend the concert or party of the season, and feel that pricking pain and see the fatal little spot of red on the eyelid that surely foretells the coming of a sty, have no fears for the result, but put in a small bag a teaspoonful of black tea, on which pour enough boiling water to moisten; as soon as cooled, squeeze it on the eye and let it remain until meeting. The sty will, in all probability, be gone; if not, one more application will be certain to remove it. —St. Louis Republic.

How to Clean Marble.

To clean marble, brush off the dirt with a piece of chamois; then apply with a brush a good coat of gum arabic of about the consistency of thick moustache; expose it to the sun or wind to dry. In a short time it will peel off. If all the gum should not peel off, wash it with clean water and a cloth. If the first application does not have the desired effect, it should be tried again. —Boston Budget.

A Child's First Awakening.

There are many bitter awakenings from one's lapsing sleep on the way through the world, but none quite so sad as a child's first awakening to the fact that mother sometimes tells "fearless little fibs," or that father does not always hold to the letter of his agreements, or even that sister Kate's rosy cheeks come in a patchboard box and are applied with a charcoal stick. It seems a small thing to you no doubt, and perhaps you laugh at the child's look of wide-eyed wonder when it hears you tell the servant to say you are "back at home," or watches you dipping some regulated bargain, but verily I say unto you, there is no new made grave beneath all the sparkling stars so set in the night of heaven and the angels as this first dawn aimed at uncorrupted honor and perfect truth. —Amber in Chicago Journal.

LANDS AND HOMES.

Marion county is situated in the heart of the magnificent Willamette valley, the central gem in the cluster of rich counties that form the princely domain, and is the banner womanhood of the great north-west in all the essentials that go towards making it a profitable abiding place, and a home for the thrifty farmer, the cunning artisan and the industrious mechanic.

Rich in its agricultural resources in its cultivated and uncultivated lands, in its water powers, and minerals; rich in its colleges and schools of learning, and with a climate unsurpassed for its salubrity, it presents to the immigrant from the overcrowded states, where cold winters and hot summers, with terrible cyclones, prevail, who comes to the coast with some means, advantages that no other county in Oregon possesses.

Much has been written of this western country that requires a stretch of the imagination to comprehend, and numerous complaints are heard from the class who have been misled by them, so in this brief sketch the writer desires to avoid exaggeration as to its present and prospective advantages, asking those in the east into whose hands this may fall—particularly those who have their eyes directed towards this coast—to peruse it carefully, feeling that it is not written to lure immigrants within its borders, but only as a truthful description of a land which, if it does not "flow milk and honey," contains within its bosom wealth and resources equal to any other county on the Pacific side of the Rocky mountains!

BOUNDARIES.

Marion county is bounded on the north by the Willamette river and Butte creek which separates it from Clackamas county; on the east by Clackamas county and the Cascade mountains, which separate it from Wasco county; on the south by the Santiam river and the north fork of the Santiam, separating it from Linn county, and on the west by the Willamette river.

PHYSICAL FORMATION.

The county contains, including valley, prairie and mountain lands, about 940,000 acres. There are two main divisions, the mountain and the valley. The latter extends from the Willamette river to the foot of the Cascade mountains, a distance of about 17 miles.

The mountainous portion contains some fourteen townships of mostly unsurveyed land; lying in a strip twelve miles north and south by forty miles east and west, and comprises all classes of land, from rich narrow valleys in the passes, up through all the grades of rolling, hilly and broken, to that of rock-bound canyons and inaccessible craggy peaks. It is generally heavily timbered, and in the near future will be valuable for its lumber supplies. These hills and mountains afford a wonderful summer range for stock, and many of the more enterprising farmers are availing themselves of this opportunity, and when the cold frosts of autumn approach, the stock are brought out to fresh pastures, thus enabling them to survive the winter storms with little care.

GREAT ADVANTAGES.

A decided advantage Marion county has over many others is the diversified farming interest that can be carried on throughout the entire year; notwithstanding this is a wet climate during the winter months, the uplands are seldom so wet as work, and long before the prairie farmers are through with their seedling, the hill farmer is preparing for his summer work. And yet the low lands are much preferred by many; the yield per acre is generally greater, and perhaps less labor is required to place the soil in proper condition for crops; and then should the season prove dry, the bottom lands are sure to bring the best crops. No better farming land can be found in the United States than that on the noted Howell prairie, French prairie, Santiam prairie and Salem prairie. The soil of these are wonderfully productive. With good cultivation, forty bushels of wheat and sixty of oats per acre can be readily secured.

FACILITIES FOR MARKET.

The Willamette river, with two lines of railroad running the entire length of the county from north to south, with the Oregon Pacific road crossing the southeast corner of the county, affords ample facilities to reach a market in any direction.

SALEM

Is the capital of the state and county seat of Marion county, situated on the Willamette river—and on the O. & C. railroad. Costly buildings have been erected, among which the state capital building, county court house, Chemekete hotel, opera house, new public school building, Catholic school building, Methodist church, Willamette University, and many private residences and business blocks, which will compare favorably with older and larger cities.

GENERAL.

All things considered, the Willamette valley has the best country in the world, and Marion county is about centrally located therein. To those seeking homes in the west, to better opportunities can be offered, than are found here. Persons desiring information regarding Marion county or the Willamette valley, those wanting farming lands, stock farms, business property or city residences, will be promptly and reliably informed by addressing the well known firm of Willis & Chamberlin, real estate agents, opera house block, Salem, Oregon.
